Ever since I was a kid I used to be super amused looking at bikes, especially 'Sunny' model which is very old and we could locate that vehicle in most of the households in 1990s. At 5pm in the evening I would wait for my mother to return from work. So, that she could take me for rounds on her bike. Every night after dinner my dad, mom and I would get on the Sunny and travel to the bridge nearby to walk, up and down the bridge. As days passed by, I would secretly take the bike out by myself and stroll through the streets. I would explore the city by riding this bike.

I remember how the streets used to be free of traffic, narrow and livelier. Once I grew up my friends and me would take our bicycles and move across the whole area. Now, the same streets are so much different to how it was earlier. Not many children ride bicycles on the street anymore. Riding bikes used to be my favourite fun pastime back then.
